Looking Through My Window

What do you see in your future? That is the question everyone around me is asking. Juniors and seniors are struggling at the last minute to find what they want to do or where they want to go. That is not me at all.

I'm a freshman at St. Francis Kansas. I have known what I wanted to be ever since I was a little girl. I want to be a therapist to help families and kids work past their struggles in life. The main reason why I want to do this is because of all the kids around me from bad homes or families who don't care.

My family is supporting me on what I want to be. School for me is really hard, but I can get by with passing grades. I have had problems with divorced parents, boys and girls. It's a typical teenage life to have a lot of problems in high school. Some girls who don't have the cutest clothes the most popular boyfriend don't always fit in. In my opinion I think that having less friends and knowing who your true friends are is more important than having a million friends and dating the most popular guy.

I'm on my path to following my dreams; I hope to see you on this magical dream ride. Thanks for looking through my window of future. I hope to be looking through yours soon.

Looking Through my Window

What do you see in your future? That is the question everyone around me is asking. Juniors and seniors are struggling at the last minute to find what they want to do and where they want to go. That is not me at all.

I'm a freshman at St. Francis, Kansas. I have known what I wanted to be ever since I was a little girl. I want to be a psychologist to help families and kids work past their struggles in life. The main reason why I want to do this is because of kids around me with drug related hobbies with violence.

My family is supporting me on what I want to be. School for me is really hard but I can get by with passing grades. I have had problems with divorced parents, boys and girls. It's a typical teenage life to have many problems in high school. Some girls who don't have the cutest clothes, the most popular boyfriend don't always fit in. In my opinion I think that having less friends and knowing who your true friends are is more important than having a million friends and dating the most popular guy.
